

Counselor's Corner – Prepping for SAT / ACT Tests – December 9, 2016

Season's Greetings students!

What better way to make your Christmas wishes of college come true than to start working through an ACT or SAT prep program?

See previous emails for more info, but for now, plan on preparing for the ACT which will be administered free of charge on February 28th here at MCA.

Then plan on prepping for the SAT which you can register to take on Jan 21, Mar 11, May 6, or June 3.

Based on your college ambitions you may decide to take one or both exam a second time in the Fall of Senior year. Don't forget that many colleges Superscore the SAT or ACT meaning they will combine your highest section scores from different test dates! This could be very advantageous.

Here is some info about prep books and programs available online:

Make sure to buy the most CURRENT edition offered! The tests change from time to time, so you want the most recently released prep book.

You can find these books on Amazon, Barnes & Noble, etc.

The College Board releases an official SAT prep book, and the ACT releases an official prep book that you can purchase.

Kaplan, Princeton Review, and Barron's are also trusted and release prep books for both exams.

Don't forget about the online prep options such as Khan Academy and ACT Online Prep that I have mentioned in previous emails!

Here is another brand new prep option for the ACT: <https://www.kaptest.com/act>. ACT has officially partnered with Kaplan.

Let me know if you have questions or are having trouble with any of this! You can do it!

Best,
Mr. Rezzo
